KATE CLARENDON, by Emmerson Bennett, is published this day; price 50 cents.

This is a beautiful romance, and one that will never fail to please the reader. The scene is laid on the bank of the beautiful Ohlo, some five or six miles above Cincinnati, at a time when that now great city contained only a few log cabins, and when the great forests stretching away on either hand were alive with wild beasts and marderous awayse. As a faithful picture of the early times, when danger hung upon every step of the bold pioneer, it cannot be excelled. The description of the scenery is accurate; and thousands, since reading the work, have been induced to visit the spot where the scene is located, and have viewed it with all the interest of classic ground.

Carlington Castle' is a thrilling picture of the sufferings and trials of one, whose tender frame might well have yielded to a frightful accumulation of horrors, had not an abiding faith and an exalted moral courage preserved her through her trials. It is impossible to become acquainted with instances of such lofty fortitude as evinced by the heroine of this book, without a thrill of admiration; and it is also impossible to read of the atrocities and cruckies, both physica;
and mental, that were inflicted upon her, without a feeling of almost vehement indignation.

THE HISTORICAL EDUCATOR
is published monthly, in peris price 25 cents
For a work of universal interest and utility, the Historical Educator will not be surpassed by any extant. It will be perceived, by the following scheme, that it embrace severy department of History essential to the present age, as follows:

1. The VOYAGES AND TRAVELS OF ANTIQUITY commencing with HERODOTUS, whom CICERO called the "Father of History."

II THE HISTORY OF AMERICA.
EVERY number of the Historical Educator will contain a portion of the above departments.
The entire work will include the discoveries of ancient travelers and voyagers, anterior to the fail of the Western Empire; those of the Michel Ages, to the termination of the Eastern Empire; about the histories of countries with the names of which the majority are acquainted, but whose origin and the manners and enstone of whose inhabitants, are but little or imperfectly known. It will, of course, include the records of modern travelers and voyagers.

Each chapter of the Historical Educator will be accompanied with copious Notes and References; and these, together with the very namerous Pictorial Hustrations, will furnish a vast ament of the nost caulious and instructive information. The various departments will present the result of many years' careful preparation, and the fluorical Hustrations. Ways and Diagrams will involve an outles of more than Ten Thousand Dollars.

The Historical Hencator will be uniform in size with the Popular Educator, to which were it will form a valuable companion.
